Simple Measures That Will Generally Give Complete Resuscitation. Women faint much more frequently than men do, and young women than older ones. Yet old women do faint, and a fainting fit is more dangerous with them than with the others; and even strong men now and then succumb to the same weakness. Of course where there is disease of the heart. ecasioning the phenomena of fainting, it has no respect of age or sex or person. In cases of what is known as fatty degeneration of the heart, or as a result of profuse hemorrhage, fainting becomes invested with great danger, and the event may even be fatal, the subject never coming out of the state of syncope. But in most in-"I seem to have belonged to you alstances fainting is a merely functional ways," she said, with a benutiful canuffair, implying nothing serious beyond the moment; in fact being more of a relief than otherwise, and more
